UCEAP VISITING PROFESSORSHIP
POSITION DESCRIPTION & PROGRAM SUMMARY
Regional Director Mary McMahon, Asia and Africa

CHINA
Fudan University, Shanghai

ELIGIBILITY
UC Senate Members (tenured faculty, lecturers with SOE)

APPOINTMENT & RESIDENCY PERIOD
Late August through late December, 2014

HOST UNIVERSITY AND CAPACITY
Fudan University – Capacity up to 70 UC students, plus up to 30 Fudan University Students

JOB AND PROGRAM DESCRIPTION
Ladder-rank UC faculty in the social sciences or humanities are invited to apply for a teaching position in the UC-Fudan University Joint Program in International Studies (JPIS) for Fall Semester, 2014. The JPIS is a series of English-language semester courses that concentrate on the study of the processes, manifestations, and debates of globalization. UC and Fudan University students take courses together, pursue research projects, and engage in critical thinking about globalization and its related impact on social, cultural, environmental, political, and economic issues.

The curriculum consists of upper-division, interdisciplinary and comparative courses which concentrate on globalization and the associated debates, international relations, economics, and culture of China. Courses are taught or co-taught in English by Fudan University and UC faculty. Associated tutorial or discussion session provided by UC faculty.

TEACHING
UC faculty instructor will be required to teach or co-teach a primary required course that constitutes the core course of the program curriculum. The core course is projected to have an average enrollment of 60 students, depending on student applications and interest. Faculty will have some latitude in determining the structure, content, and activities of the course listed below.

Debating Globalization: This core course is required for all UC students and may be co-taught with a Fudan University faculty member, dependent on identification of faculty member with similar or complementary interests. The course deals with the process of, and debates concerning, globalization, China’s responses and contributions to globalization, the impacts of globalization on Chinese society, culture and economy, and the unique history and role of Shanghai in China, the Pacific region and the world. This course should capitalize on the Shanghai setting to encourage out-of-classroom exploration of Shanghai related to associated processes, changes, and developments. Course should be appropriate for accomplished, advanced undergraduates with no prior training in the discipline.

LANGUAGE SKILLS
- Visiting Faculty – Chinese language ability desirable, but not required.
- Students – There is no language prerequisite for students; instruction is provided in English.
FACULTY DISCIPLINES PREFERRED FOR THIS POSITION
Social Sciences (Global Studies, International Studies, Global Economics, Political Science, etc.) or Humanities (Cultural Studies, Literature, Media Studies, etc.) preferred, but all fields related to contemporary China will be considered.

OFFICE LOCATION
JPIS is offered at the Handan campus of Fudan University in the Yangpu District of northeast Shanghai. The EAP Study Center is located on the Fudan University campus.

OFFICE STAFF
A UC Study Center Director and staff assist UC students and UC instructors with many details of the program.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS
This position is a Visiting Professorship rather than a Study Center Directorship.

COMPENSATION
Appointee remains on home campus department payroll and continues to receive regular salary from the home department.

- UCEAP will provide the home campus with replacement funds in the total amount of $10,000 for the appointment term, with appropriate adjustment for a semester-campus faculty appointment. The home department will provide instructions to UCEAP regarding the appropriate account to credit with those funds.

- Benefits are provided in accordance with applicable University policies and are administered by each UC campus. UCEAP does not reimburse the home campus for any costs related to benefits or sabbatical accrual.

Travel
- UCEAP will provide individual airfare (lowest economy rate per UCLA Travel quote) to and from California and Shanghai, China for the term of residency.

- Reimbursement for participant of costs associated with the visa needed for temporary residency in China.

Housing
UCEAP will provide reimbursement of lodging expenses concurrent with the appointment term, not to exceed $4,000. The Visiting Professor will need to locate and secure housing.

Relocation and Removal Expenses
UCEAP will provide a total maximum reimbursement of up to $500 for shipping/excess baggage for relocation to the Italy and return relocation to California upon submittal of appropriate documentation of expenses.

For questions about application and interview process, contact UCEAP Human Resources Director Bryna Bock bbock@eap.ucop.edu. For questions that are program-specific, contact UCEAP Regional Director Mary McMahon mmcMahon@eap.ucop.edu. For more information about UCEAP, visit www.eap.ucop.edu.